Visit Brings Back Memories

The following material is from a letter received from new life-member Arley Spain (former Upper Rogue resident), of Longview, Washington:

On April 22, 2004, we arrived in Trail, in early evening after a trip across Tiller-Trail Divide. This was an area where I had logged in the late '40s and '50s.

I had heard that the old McVey that I had operated with the Jantzer Logging Company was at the museum in Trail, so I wanted to see it. Unfortunately the museum was closed and the sign indicated it wouldn't be open until Saturday. But we pulled into the museum grounds to look at the items in the yard and there it was—the McVey, the jammer, the loader, now a bright yellow!

Memories came flooding back. In 1946, George Jantzer Lumber Company sold to Ross/DeArmand. Lewis Jantzer retained the Ross/DeArmand logging contract. I was hired by Lewis in November 1946 to operate the jammer. It was mounted on a Bull Dog Mack Truck of World War I vintage. I was the jammer puncher until 1948 and returned to operate it again in 1950, when Lewis became a partner in Trail Creek Lumber Company. This was my job until 1960 when I left the logging industry. In those days, we had many one-log loads, when the pine and fir were huge and prime. Sure enough, this was my old jammer!

Shady Cove was my home for years. My kids started to school there and I built my brother's, Delbert, house there as well as one of my own. I have many fond memories of Trail and Shady Cove and the people I worked with and knew back then. It was a treat to see the old McVey and to know it has a spot in the museum.
